

SyberWorks announces a new article available in its Media Center: “Choosing the Right Content-Authoring Tool For Your e-Learning Needs”

Waltham, Massachusetts –March 20, 2006

SyberWorks, Inc., a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, today announces a new article available in the SyberWorks Online Media Center, “Choosing the Right Content-Authoring Tool For Your e-Learning Needs.”

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“The article is written by Dana Fine, Senior Instructional Designer here at SyberWorks, and is the next article in a series that covers useful topics that are important to online training content development. This article looks at how to select a content-authoring tool that will best meet your company's or organization's e-Learning needs.”

Boggs continues, “There are several hundred e-Learning tools out there in the market place today and selecting the proper tool to meet your e-Learning content development needs is an important decision. Dana offers some valuable insights and strategies to help you pick the course-authoring tool that best fits your e-Learning program requirements.”

The article is located in the SyberWorks Online Media Center at <http://www.syberworks.com/e-LearningResources.htm> in the About Us section of the SyberWorks web site.
