CLS Computertrainingen Selects the SyberWorks Web-Based Learning Management System

Waltham, Massachusetts – September 20, 2006

SyberWorks, a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, announced today that they were selected by CLS Computertrainingen, a leading computer training company located in the Netherlands. CLS Computertrainingen provides computer software training to corporations in the Netherlands and Belgium and e-Learning across Europe.

Peter Gadellaa, President of CLS Computertrainingen states, "We currently provide traditional classroom-based training and want to offer e-Learning because the web-based training delivery method is a very effective way to supply performance support training to busy working professionals."

Gadellaa says, "We evaluated many e-Learning solutions and were pleasantly surprised to find that the SyberWorks web-based learning management systems offered a lot of functionality at a reasonable price. The system's set up is clean and simple to administer. The user interface is well designed, attractive, and it's easy for students to find what they need. Our European multinational customers need their training developed in several different languages. The system's multilingual functionality is straightforward and makes designing courses in different languages uncomplicated."
Gadellaa continues:

"Right from our first interaction and continuing today, the SyberWorks team works hard to answer my questions and provide knowledgeable advice. Their customer support team is astonishingly patient, polite, and friendly."

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states, "We are excited to add another international customer that will make full use of our multilingual functionality and look forward to working with CLS Computertrainingen going forward."
