

SyberWorks Media Center Debuts New Article - “Documentation and e-Learning Part 4: Get Real!—Try “Augmented Reality”

Waltham, Massachusetts – May 3, 2010

SyberWorks, Inc., a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System (LMS) industry, today announces an article available in the SyberWorks Online Media Center: “Documentation and e-Learning (Part 5): Get Real!—Try ‘Augmented Reality (AR),’” by Dave Powell, Documentation Manager for SyberWorks, Inc.

Mary Kay Lofurno, Director of Marketing at SyberWorks, states, “In Part 5 of this series, Dave Powell talks about using ‘Augmented Reality,’ a mix of web-cam feeds with computer-generated images, UI elements, and text streaming video content that allows students to explore in online training courses.

“He sites examples such as an R&D video by BMW that teaches car repair or Homeland Security’s firefighting application that trains first responders but does not expose them to risk. The article mentions various AR applications such as Adobe Flex and a 3D-graphics program like MAYA, Blender, or even Google SketchUp.”

The article is located in the SyberWorks Online Media Center at <http://www.syberworks.com/articles/documentation-and-elearning-part5-article.htm>.
