

SyberWorks Learning Management Software Announces Configurable Manager & Learner Dashboards

Waltham, Massachusetts –June 15, 2010

SyberWorks, a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, announced today configurable managers & learner dashboards are now available in the SyberWorks Training Center Learning Management System/Learning Content Management System™.

The SyberWorks Training Center configurable dashboards allow administrators, instructors and learners to quickly find the information they need. For the learner, they are able to see their entire learning plan of all offline and online learning events as well as due dates, mandatory and optional learning events, Managers view their own learning plan and can track the learning plans and upcoming due dates of their direct report as well as drill down to learning plans of their indirect reports, Instructors can view their own learning plan and any class that they scheduled to teach along with the detail of those classes (enrollment, location, time and date, etc.

David Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“The dashboard is a significant development in our system because it gives companies the option to configure the system for their need from various modules within the system, depending upon their configuration set up. From a manager’s perspective, you can mix and match various data points resulting from pre-defined feature sets. It makes administering training program easier because you can drill down into data within various divisions’ right from your browser. Learners are able to have a birds-eye view of all the data points pertinent to their training program. They can see their schedule, take a course or quiz, print their certificates and view their learning plans.”

Boggs continues, “The best part is that the dashboard is configurable so company or organization can set up exactly what they would like to see — and its all there, completely in one browser window.”
